Master of Arts in K-12
Educational Leadership and Certification Pathways Program

About The Program

The master's program in K-12 Educational Administration prepares aspiring educators for leadership roles in public, charter and private school settings.

Our Program

- Commits to developing high-quality, collaborative leadership opportunities for effective and equitable teaching and learning;
- Fosters relationships and a strong community of practice of educators across diverse contexts;
- Is taught by both researchers and former practitioners;
- Uses both a hybrid approach, combining face-to-face courses and online instruction and a fully online program with a targeted launch for Fall 2025.
- Certification Pathway Program
  - Preparation for the School Administrator certificate can be accomplished through the Certification Pathway Program (CPP), for those who already hold an education-related master's degree. Certification Pathway students generally complete the six core courses required in the K-12 Master's in Education Administration and the School Leadership Internship. The program blends face-to-face and online learning and is designed for working educators.
